To Whom It May Concern

It gives me immense pleasure to place on record my appreciation for Daughters of Bharat and its founders Ms. Dhruvika Singh, Ms. Siya Gupta, and Mr. Harshvardhan Singh Shekhawat for their extraordinary contribution to women's empowerment.

On 18th August 2025, at CLC, Sikar, the team successfully conducted an awareness program that engaged 1,000 young girls in meaningful sessions on legal rights, gender equality, and self-empowerment. This effort was part of what stands as the largest Women's Legal Rights Awareness Campaign for girls and women by high school students that we have witnessed until now.

The program combined interactive sessions and booklet distribution to maximize its reach and impact. During the sessions, the students participated in open discussions, asked questions, and gained clarity on issues that directly affect their everyday lives. The booklets, written in simple and accessible language, provided structured information on women's legal rights. They allowed the girls to revisit key points after the session, to share the knowledge with peers and family members, and to keep a lasting resource for guidance in the future.

This dual approach—sessions that built awareness through dialogue, and booklets that reinforced learning—ensured that the initiative created not just awareness for the day, but a sustainable and long-term impact. For many of the participants, it was the first time they had engaged with or even received written material on their rights, making the campaign both unique and transformative.

That such a campaign has been conceptualized and implemented by high school students makes it truly inspiring. It reflects a new generation of leaders who are deeply committed to advancing equality and social justice.

I commend Daughters of Bharat for their pioneering efforts and firmly believe that their initiative will continue to inspire many more young changemakers across the nation.

With admiration and best wishes,

Sincerely,

Er. Shrawan Choudhary
